

HISTORY

9697/05

Paper 5 The History of the USA, c.1840–1968

May/June 2008

3 hours

Additional Materials: Answer Booklet/Paper

READ THESE INSTRUCTIONS FIRST

If you have been given an Answer Booklet, follow the instructions on the front cover of the Booklet.
Write your Centre number, candidate number and name on all the work you hand in.
Write in dark blue or black pen.
You may use a soft pencil for any diagrams, graphs or rough working.
Do not use staples, paper clips, highlighters, glue or correction fluid.

Section A

Answer Question 1.

Section B

Answer any three questions.

At the end of the examination, fasten all your work securely together.
All questions in this paper carry equal marks.

This document consists of 4 printed pages.

Section A: The Road to Secession and Civil War

You must answer Question 1.

PRESIDENTIAL INAUGURAL ADDRESSES, 1849–1861

- 1 Read the sources and then answer the question.

Source A

It is for Congress to regulate domestic policy. I shall look with confidence to the patriotism of that body to adopt such measures of conciliation as may harmonise conflicting interests and perpetuate that Union which should be the paramount object of our affections. In any action promoting an object so near the heart of everyone who loves his country I will unite with other branches of Government.

Zachary Taylor: Presidential Inaugural Address, 5 March 1849.

Source B

I believe that slavery, as it exists in different States, is recognized by the Constitution. I believe that the States where it exists are entitled to remedies to enforce the constitutional provisions. I hold that the 1850 Compromise measures are strictly constitutional and should be carried into effect. I believe that the authorities of this Republic are bound to regard the rights of the South as they would view any other legal and constitutional right, and that laws to enforce them should be respected and obeyed. Such are my convictions. I passionately hope that the question is at rest, and that no sectional or fanatical excitement may again threaten the durability of our institutions.

Franklin Pierce: Presidential Inaugural Address, 4 March 1853.

Source C

What a happy conception for Congress to decide that the will of the majority shall govern, to the settlement of the question of slavery in the Territories and to leave the people thereof free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution.

The whole Territorial question being settled upon the principle of popular sovereignty, everything practical has been decided. All agree that under the Constitution slavery in the States is beyond the reach of any power except that of the States where it exists. May we hope that the long agitation on this subject will end, that the geographical parties to which it has given birth will become extinct? It will be better for the country when the public mind shall be diverted from this question to others of more pressing importance. This question of slavery is of far greater importance than any mere political question, because should the agitation continue it may eventually endanger the personal safety of a large portion of our countrymen where slavery exists. Let every Union-loving man exert his influence to suppress this agitation.

James Buchanan: Presidential Inaugural Address, 4 March 1857.

Source D

Apprehension seems to exist among the people of the Southern States that by the accession of a Republican Administration their property and personal security are to be endangered. There has never been any reasonable cause for such apprehension.

I have no purpose to interfere with the institution of slavery in the States where it exists; I believe I have no lawful right to do so, and I have no inclination to do so.

I hold that by the Constitution, the Union of these States is perpetual. Perpetuity is implied in the fundamental laws of all national governments. No government ever had a provision in its organic law for its own termination.

It follows that no State by its own resolution can lawfully get out of the Union; that ordinances to that effect are legally void, and that acts of violence within any State against the authority of the United States are insurrection or revolution.

Therefore I consider that by the Constitution the Union of these States is unbroken and to the utmost of my ability I shall take care, as the Constitution itself expressly enjoins me, that the laws of the Union be faithfully executed in all States.

One section of our country believes slavery is right and ought to be extended, while the other believes it is wrong and ought not to be extended. This is the only substantial dispute.

In your hands, my dissatisfied fellow countrymen, is the momentous issue of civil war. The Government will not assail you. You can have no conflict without being the aggressors. You have no oath registered in heaven to destroy the Government, while I have made the most solemn one to 'preserve, protect, and defend it'.

We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies.

Abraham Lincoln: First Presidential Inaugural Address, 4 March 1861.

Source E

If the Union were to survive, decisive leadership was essential but this was beyond the capacity of Pierce. He showed himself to be shallow, weak and too ready to back the Southern wing of his party. He believed that an expansionist foreign policy in trying to acquire Cuba (where slavery was legal) was the best way of diverting attention from the slavery issue and to unite the country.

Buchanan was indecisive and obstinate yet lacked firmness when needed. He had hoped for a peaceful term but the decision of the Supreme Court allowing slavery in all Territories unleashed the worst passions of pro- and anti- slavery when his administration was less than a week old. Thereafter he reeled from disaster to disaster.

From a modern historian's account of the 1850s.

Now answer the following question.

'Lincoln was the only President capable of dealing with the basic issues underlying the sectional conflict in the United States.' Using Sources A–E, discuss how far the evidence supports this assertion.

Section B

You must answer three questions from this section.

- 2 Evaluate the impact of the 'Gold Rush' of 1849 on America's westward expansion.
- 3 How close did the Confederacy come to 'winning' the Civil War?
- 4 'Progressivism was simply a set of superficial reforms which evaded rather than addressed the ills of American society.' How far is this judgement valid?
- 5 Analyse the principal factors which secured major successes for the Civil Rights movement between 1945 and 1968.
- 6 Which were the more typical of 1920s America: Prohibition and intolerance or the Jazz Age and increasing social freedom?
- 7 'Though always expressed in terms of high moral principles, US foreign policy from 1913 to 1945 was in fact driven by the relentless pursuit of US national interests.' How accurate is this comment?
- 8 Assess the impact of television on American society and politics from 1950 to 1968.

Copyright Acknowledgements:

Source E © Samuel Eliot Morison, Henry Steele Commager, William E. Leuchtenburg; The Growth of the American Republic: Vol 1; 1980. By permission of Oxford University Press, Inc.

Permission to reproduce items where third-party owned material protected by copyright is included has been sought and cleared where possible. Every reasonable effort has been made by the publisher (UCLES) to trace copyright holders, but if any items requiring clearance have unwittingly been included, the publisher will be pleased to make amends at the earliest possible opportunity.

University of Cambridge International Examinations is part of the Cambridge Assessment Group. Cambridge Assessment is the brand name of University of Cambridge Local Examinations Syndicate (UCLES), which is itself a department of the University of Cambridge.